

5-2-2011

May 2nd 2011

CSUSB

Follow this and additional works at: <http://scholarworks.lib.csusb.edu/coyote-chronicle>

---

Recommended Citation

CSUSB, "May 2nd 2011" (2011). Coyote Chronicle. Paper 70.
<http://scholarworks.lib.csusb.edu/coyote-chronicle/70>

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the CSUSB Archives at CSUSB ScholarWorks. It has been accepted for inclusion in Coyote Chronicle by an authorized administrator of CSUSB ScholarWorks. For more information, please contact scholarworks@csusb.edu.

Coyote Chronicle

Breaking News:

President confirms Osama's death

By ERIC BROWN Managing Editor

After nearly a decade strewn with war, fear and terror, it was announced by President Barack Obama, that the mastermind behind the 9/11 attacks, Osama bin Laden was killed and that his body remains in US custody.

Late Sunday evening, Obama appeared before the press to deliver a short briefing and emotionally charged speech over the news of America's latest triumph in the war on terror.

Since late 2002 there has been little seen or heard from the physical body of bin Laden as America's response to 9/11 was so intense as to force him into hiding after invading Afghanistan.

Despite his dwelling in the shadows, bin Laden's influence was ever felt through his terrorist network, Al Qaeda, even as America took steps to heal the scar left upon its shores.

Both Obama and President George W. Bush made catching bin Laden a top priority. As explained by Obama, when intel manifested itself last August as to the possible whereabouts of America's most wanted criminal, he ordered the CIA to pursue the avenue with all available resources and urgency.

The past week has seen a spike in activity, albeit unbeknownst to the public, as Obama explained he had been receiving actionable intelligence regarding bin Laden, and the order was given on April 29 to go through with an operation to capture or kill bin Laden.

Having found bin Laden in a secure facility outside of Abbottabad in Pakistan, he was engaged by a small US military contingent, in which a small fire fight ensued.

Continued on Pg. 3

Homeboy comes to CSUSB

By CHRISTOPHER JOHNSON
Staff Writer

"You are exactly what God had in mind when he made you, and once you realize it you become that truth and nothing can touch that, no bullet can pierce it, and no prison wall can contain it," said by Father Gregory Boyle.

Father Boyle, aka homeboy, was the keynote speaker at CSUSB's sixth annual Ethnic Studies Symposium held on April 26 at the Santos Manuel Student Union Events Center.

He is the founder of Homeboy Industries, the largest gang intervention program in the country.

This industry, founded in 1992, offers free programs such as counseling, education, tattoo removal, job training, placement and parenting classes to at-risk youth, former gang members, and the formerly incarcerated.

During Boyle's speech he shared stories of his experiences with gang members. Some of these stories led to laughter, while others caused silence and saddened faces

Continued on Pg. 3

Christopher Johnson | Chronicle Photo

Homeboy founder, Father Boyle visits the CSUSB campus.

Defense Of Marriage Act loses its defense

By KYLA COOK
Staff Writer

A law firm hired by the House Republicans to defend the constitutionality of the Defense of Marriage Act (DOMA) withdrew from that case on April 18 and gay rights groups claimed the withdrawal a victory, reported The New York Times.

However, upon withdrawal of the case, Paul D. Clement, partner and assigned lawyer on the case, resigned from King & Spalding and has taken the case over to Bancroft P.L.L.C as a partner and will continue to defend DOMA.

DOMA was initially signed into law by President Bill Clinton back in 1996 and defines marriage in America as a legal union between one man and one woman.

DOMA denies same-sex couples of over 1,100 federal benefits and protections such as filing joint taxes; receiving spousal, mother's and father's or surviving spouse benefits under social security and receiving equal family health and pension benefits as federal civilian employees, as listed on hrc.org (the Human Rights Campaign).

The reason given for withdrawal of the case by King & Spalding is said to be that the approval process for the case was inadequate rather than from pressure from gay and lesbian advocacy groups, reported The New York Times.

According to Shear and Schwartz of The New York Times, Clement said, "I resign out of the firmly held belief that a representation should not be abandoned because the client's legal position is extremely unpopular in certain quarters ... But having undertaken the representation; I believe there is no honorable course for me but to complete it."

President of Equality Matters (a queer advocacy group), Richard Socarides said, "Mr. Clement's statement misses the point entirely. While it is sometimes appropriate for lawyers to represent unpopular clients when an important principle is at issue, here the only principle he wishes to defend is discrimination and 2nd-class citizenship for gay Americans," according to Shear and Schwartz.

While gay and lesbian is a term widely used, in correspondence to the CSUSB Pride Center, "Queer is really becoming a more appropriate term and more encompassing than gay or LGBT [Lesbian Gay Bisexual Transgender]," said Megan Rush graduate assistant, CSUSB Pride Center.

In opposition to DOMA there is the Respect for Marriage Act (RMA) which would repeal DOMA. RMA would restore rights of all lawfully married couples to receive the benefits of marriage under federal law while including same-sex couples.

Continued on Pg. 2

Apple becomes Big Brother

By LINDA TRAN
Staff Writer

The makers of Apple have been saving user's location data directly from iPhones and iPads and are being stored in a hidden database file, according to The Enterprise Newsweekly.

The news came April 20, and questions began to rise immediately from many including Apple users and government officials.

A day after, Rep. Edward Markey (D) and Sen. Al Franken (D) directly sent letters to Apple CEO Steve Jobs asking why the location data is being saved.

Apple did reveal a week later why they were keeping the data.

They discovered a "bug" that was saving too much data and promised it will soon be fixed.

They also announced that a new software update was being made, and instead of tracking the location data for months, it will only be tracked for up to seven days, according to KTLA.

The news was a shock among students who are Apple users, visualizing a similar situation to George Orwell's "1984" Big Brother scope where everyone would fall under full supervision by authorities; yet, some students on campus believe they're keeping the data for good reasons.

Student and iPhone user Miriam Santoscoy said that she does not think the location data is an invasion to her privacy.

"They're keeping location data for

Eric Brown | Chronicle Photo

Apple's GPS data for mobile platforms has brought much scrutiny due to company tracking of customer data. a reason," said Santoscoy. "I think it's a good thing. They're able to track it because if I lost it, they would find it for me."

Some students on campus feel uncomfortable about the tracking and how it is similar to being under surveillance.

Ana Flores, a student and iPhone user, said being tracked is an invasion of her privacy and does not like how Apple is not giving her the option to turn off the location data saving feature.

Some social network sites such as

Continued on Pg. 2

Stagecoach heats up Indio with country and culture

See Page 10

Greek Speak takes a look at CSUSB's Greek Week

See Page 8

New Blackboard presents same old problem,

See Page 6

Murillo to head the Board of Directors for Edfund

See Page 2

Coyote Commentary: How well did the NFL draft go

See Page 15

Catch all these stories and much more online at coyotechronicle.net

Murillo elected Chairman of the Board

Dr. Murillo plans to adhere to a set plan in order to ensure that the higher education system continues to serve students.

By DAVID MEDRANO
Staff Writer

CSUSB’s financial aid is in the hands of newly elected chair of the Edfund Board of Directors, Dr. Enrique G. Murillo Jr.

Edfund is a non-profit public-benefit auxiliary organization that works alongside with California Student Aid Commission (CSAC) which administers all activities associated with participation in the federal student loan program.

“My responsibilities and commitment are to maintain high quality, uninterrupted services for the groups we serve,” said Murillo.

In August of 2010 the U.S. Department of Education selected Educational Credit Management Corporation (ECMC) to assume the responsibilities such as federal student loans.

Now CSAC is selling Edfund to ECMC, with expectations that there will be no problems during the transaction process.

According to PR Newswire, the transition included commitments by ECMC to support Cal Grants with $100 million in the 2010 fiscal year and at least $42 million in the 2011 fiscal year, as well as the anticipated funding for Cal Grants in future years.

“I was an education professor and researcher in higher education, access, affordability, and outcomes. I was elected chair of the board because there is a high level of confidence in my skills to maneuver Edfund, and since the stakes are so high right now we cannot afford to have any setbacks or disruptions,” said Murillo.

Murillo stressed how crucial it was that the transition go as planned. He said that if ECMC didn’t fulfill their guarantees, there would be hundreds of thousands of students that will not get financial aid and consequently won’t be able to complete their college education. Ultimately, he said that there would be more people making less money over the course of their lifetimes and less money and resources going back to the infrastructure of our state.

Throughout the transition, Edfund will be providing systems and web services to ECMC. Once the transition is complete ECMC will resume the guarantor responsibilities and all federal and student loans guaranteed by CSAC and serviced through Edfund will be transferred to ECMC for ongoing servicing.

To Murillo, in the grand scheme of things, the higher education system is in danger of being dismantled. He said that the state of the economy and budget are factors that we have to fight through to keep Cal Grants and financial aid for students.

“Financial aid is an investment and education is an economic development. That’s why this transition is so important, because we are trying to sustain the viability of Cal Grants,” said Murillo.

GO GREEN AND SAVE.

Celebrate Earth Day every day. Save money.
Save the planet. Ride Omnitrans.

Student passes available at Parking Services or omnitrans.org.

1-800-9-OMNIBUS

OMNITRANS.ORG

Apple tracks too much

Continued from Pg. 1

Twitter and Facebook give users the option to reveal their location data.

“We choose to post our check-in on Facebook,” said Flores, differentiating from the choice of sharing location data to not having the power to do so. Flores points to the issue of privacy and the choice to disclose information.

Regardless of owning an iPhone or iPad device or not, many students said they agree that technology has grown more advanced, and with the latest smartphone technology, almost any person can be tracked down.

Student Christine Andrade explained she agrees with some students that the tracking is not a personal issue and said that being a young adult may be the reason why the tracking is not much of a surprise since social network sites already reveal such personal information.

“People are always buying new technology,” said Andrade. “ I don’t think they’re thinking of the pros on cons but are only thinking of getting the latest device.”

Before the reason of the location tracking data was revealed, students believed that they were storing the information for selling purposes. Some students believed the data was saved, to show where was most frequented by users.

The corporation constantly keeps up-to-date on their security.

RMA could repeal DOMA

Continued from Pg. 1

“The fact of the matter is, it’s [DOMA] going to stay a law until RMA gets enough political support, especially from members of Congress. RMA is important,” said Rush.

Rush explained that same-sex couples may not be able to make pertinent decisions, such as medical decisions or funeral decisions, may not receive benefits when someone dies and benefits offered through employers may not be extended to the partner because the relationship is not recognized under federal law.

“The whole point is that same-sex couples may receive the same benefits of opposite-sex couples,” said Rush. “Just equal rights across the board, nothing more and nothing less.”

Christopher Johnson | Chronicle Photo

Boyle showcases his book “Tatoos on the Heart: The Power of Boundless Compassion” at the event.

‘Yotes hear Hombeboy, Boyle

Continued from Pg. 1

throughout a packed crowd.

“I suspect that if kinship was our goal we will no longer be promoting justice, but celebrating it,” said by Boyle.

Father Boyle’s main focal point of his speech was to promote seeking out mutual relationships. Despite being a priest he doesn’t view himself as any closer to God than the gang members he helps, and refers to each of them as his ‘homie,’ as they do to him.

He never found it difficult to connect with gang members and relating to their issues. “If you have a pulse you can connect,” said by Boyle.

At the symposium his book, “Tattoos on the Heart: The Power of Boundless Compassion,” was also being sold.

This book, released on March 9th, 2010, received the 2010 Southern California Indie Booksellers Association Non-Fiction Book Award, and named as one of the best Books of 2010 by Publishers Weekly, according to the Ethnic Studies Symposium pamphlet.

Boyle has worked towards a better life for all for over 20 years and has fought through many hardships. His first 10 years were marked by hate mail, death and bomb threats.

These threats weren’t by rival gang members of those he assisted, but by police and unanimous people, although, he hasn’t received a threat of any kind in the last decade.

His industry has become so well known that he and three gang members were invited to Howard University and the White House as Boyle was the keynote speaker for Helping America’s Youth Conference sponsored by Laura Bush.

The event made history by allowing the first gang members to walk through the White House.

The event was capped off by the film “La Mission,” a story of a homosexual teen who grew up in the La Mission neighborhood in San Francisco where gang violence was the norm, and an ex-gang member father who was conflicted with his own views and accepting his son’s ways.

The Ethnic Studies Steering Committee sponsored the event.

Fulbright encourages exploration

Harriet Fulbright visited the CSUSB and advised students to study abroad

By ERIC SANCHEZ
Staff Writer

Harriet Fulbright, wife of the late Sen. J. William Fulbright (D-Ark.) discussed the origins of the Fulbright Program and the importance of studying abroad at the SMSU Event Center on April 27.

The Fulbright Program is a government-funded, international educational exchange that awards approximately 8,000 grants to students and faculty researchers annually to study abroad, according to its website.

Her lecture began with a video about her husband’s life and why he looked for ways to bring people together on an international level. The video also documented how he laid the legislative framework for the United Nations.

Fulbright urged students to study in another country to broaden their views of the world.

“Students need to understand that there are different, equally valid ways of thinking,” said Fullbright in an interview after the lecture.

Here at CSUSB students can study in over 17 different countries and are encouraged to take their opportunities.

CSUSB’s Study Abroad Coordinator Elva Salgado points out that the number of CSUSB students studying abroad is increasing however there still seem to be barriers for many.

“Number one is money, number two is they’re scared,”

Eric Sanchez | Chronicle Photo

Harriet Fulbright urges ‘Yotes to study abroad.

said Fulbright.

Salgado works closely with the financial aid office to ensure that those that qualify have a package of aid and loans to help them with the costs involved.

Students consider their lives at home in the decision to go, though the idea of exploring and learning about the world is exciting to them.

“Being away from my family and friends, being homesick,” said Geselle Martinez, a student considering studying in Spain. “When I get back will things be the same...those are the things running through my head.”

The CSUSB Spain Summer Program will run from June 21 to July 30 at the University of Valladolid and offers both lower division Spanish language courses as well as upper division courses, its pamphlet states.

Application deadlines for Fulbright grants vary by country and program, but potential applicants are encouraged to apply the year before they plan to study.

“It takes time. It takes energy. But it is worth every, every ounce,” said Rosalie Giacchino-Baker, CSUSB Fulbright Coordinator.

CSUSB Biology Professor Kimberlyn Williams attended the event and recognized the benefits of cross-national research from her own experience.

“Being able to collaborate with scientists in another country who are interested in the same problems you are interested in lets you learn new ways of doing things and makes you take a broader, harder look at the work you are doing,” said Williams..

Williams worked on the restoration of native vegetation in Perth, Australia with Professors Across Borders, a program similar to what the Fulbright Program offers researchers.

Perth and Southern California share a Mediterranean-type climate so her research here works off her work there and she still collaborates with the Australian research team, she said.

Fulbright also held a second lecture on campus April 28 entitled “Working Together for a More Peaceful World: The Role of the Fulbright Program.”

The Fulbright program was founded in 1946 under legislation introduced by Sen. Fulbright.

The program is sponsored by the Department of State’s Bureau of Educational and Cultural Affairs.

Students stress over and fear future financial failure

By DAVID MEDRANO
Staff Writer

Young people are no longer considering going to college, the majority of them do not even know what they will do after high school, hindering their financial future, according to The University of Redlands’ Institute for Spacial Economic Analysis (URISEA).

Johannes Moenius, a source for The San Bernardino Sun is an associate professor at the URISEA. Moenius said that young people are not focusing on a career, and the importance of having a role model in the family.

“From the family perspective, because so many in this region have no education beyond high school, there is no role model for young adults to follow in the pursuit of a college degree,” Moenius said. “All the information for that trajectory has to come from outside the home,” he added.

According to The San Bernardino Sun, Stacy Leak, a counselor at San Andreas High School said, students often need to grab a skill quickly, noting that there are many two-year community college programs or sometimes even shorter certificate programs that can lead to well-paying and stable jobs.

These numbers lead to a sense of pessimism and apathy among CSUSB students that are graduating in a matter of months.

Rebecca Acosta a student at CSUSB on her senior year is happy to be graduating, but the uncertainty of not getting a job afterwards scares her.

“It’s getting harder to find a job in this economy, even harder when you are just graduating and getting out into the real world with little work experience,” Acosta said.

One student in particular gave his opinion on what he thinks would be a good idea for students.

“I think it would be nice to have a class where one could learn what to do in these situations, we are in a recession which means that maybe a strategy that worked in the past may not work today” Jose Sanabria said.

One student did not sound pessimistic, stating that he would find a way to make it all work.

“I’m about to graduate and I’m sure that my diploma is going to help me find something, and if I don’t I’ll just keep on working in a warehouse, it’s not like I don’t worry, is just that I decided not to let my worries control me,” James Johnson said.

Clark Stephens, director of instructional services for the Rancho Cucamonga-based View Regional Occupational Program, spoke to The San Bernardino Sun and said that his agency has developed programs, in cooperation with four West End school districts, to allow high school students at 19 schools to earn certifications in a wide variety of technical and specific vocations before or immediately after they graduate.

“We are serving more students than we ever have,” said Stephens.

David Medrano | Chronicle Photo

Al-Qaeda head killed

Continued from Pg. 1

Obama stated that no Americans were harmed in the exchange and that, when the engagement ended, bin Laden along with a few fellow family and Al Queda members, was killed.

Obama stressed the point that this operation was conducted with the cooperation of Pakistani officials and that US forces took care to avoid civilian casualties.

Furthermore, it was stressed by Obama that this was not an end to the war on terror, that America must remain vigilant. He went on to remind people that America is not at war with Islam, nor has it ever been, instead the might of America’s forces are to be directed against Al Queda and its affiliates.

Closing his speech to the press, Obama ended with a few phrases of the Pledge of Allegiance, as he sought to inspire and explain the unity that the current generations of Americans share because of 9/11.

America now stands to wait and see the effects of bin Laden’s death, even as Americans celebrate this victory, the future with terror is not over.

15%
OFF!*

*limit one per customer, not valid with other offers, not valid on to-go orders, University Parkway location only

FREE WiFi

10% off for
CSUSB students

Home of All-You-Can-Eat Pancakes!
Open 24/7 Friday-Saturday

In the April 26 issue of the Chronicle, the Volume number appeared as 18, when in fact the April 26 issue was Volume 19. Furthermore, the Staff Writer listed as “Michelle Cruz,” should be listed as Michele Cruz. The Chronicle would like to direct our readers to our online version at coyotechronicle.net for corrected versions.

Coyote Chronicle

Editor in Chief	Richard Bowie
Managing Editor	Eric Brown
Executive Assistant	Rachel Cannon
News Editor	MaryRone Shell
Asst. News Editor	Orlandria Brazier
Asst. News Editor	Mackenzie von Kleist
Features Editor	Diana Cansino
Asst. Features Editor	Isabel Tejada
Asst. Features Editor	R. Anthony Diaz
Arts and Entertainment Editor	Justin Udenze
Asst. Arts and Entertainment Editor	Jennifer Baugh
Asst. Arts and Entertainment Editor	Matthew Bramlett
Opinions Editor	Louis Penna
Sports Editor	Jesus Romero
Asst. Sports Editor	J. Levi Burnfin
Asst. Sports Editor	Hector Gama
Copy Editor	Steven Avila
Copy Editor	Joey Monzon
Online Editor	Tyson Ellingsen
Photo Editor	Moe McKinley
Asst. Photo Editor	Crystal Cuyan

Faculty Adviser Jim Smart
Advertising Manager Linda Sand

Staff Writers

Steven Avila, Matthew Bramlett, Kyla Cook, Michele Cruz, Cheran Dinger, Renee Etcheberria, Brittany Filippini, Hector Gama, Nin Garcia, Angelina Garibay, Nic Gibbs, Eileen Gutierrez, Omar Guzman, Carmen Herrera, Jhonise Hamilton, Chris Hanley, Katherine Henley, Oscar Hernadez, Yaneth Hoil, Christopher Johnson, Lindsey Martinovich, Krystal McGee, David Medrano, Adriene Moore, Ismael Morales, Justine Plemons, Brittany Shaw, Brent Thompson, Fernando Torres, Linda Tran, Annette Verdejo, Mackenzie von Kleist

Contact Information

California State University, San Bernardino
University Hall, Room UH-037
5500 University Parkway
San Bernardino, CA 92407

Office: (909) 537-5289
Advertising: (909) 537-5815

The Coyote Chronicle is published every Friday for distribution on Monday during the academic session by the Communications department.

The opinions expressed in the Chronicle are those of the student writers and editors and do not reflect the views of the university, its faculty, or any other person or institution unless expressly noted.

The appearance of any advertisement in the Chronicle does not represent an endorsement of the products or services advertised.

Chronicle reserves the right to edit or reject all materials submitted to the paper.

Monday, June 13 the Graduation Issue of the Coyote Chronicle prints, and you could be part of it

Buy your
Coyote Shout Out
for the Graduation Issue

Graduating Seniors can appear in print for just $10

Three easy options

1. Submit your own 2x3.5 inch design
2. Sumbit a photo and 30 words to our designers
3. Sumbit 60 words to our designers

CLASS OF
2011
GRADUATES

To place a shout out or for more info contact Linda Sand
909.537.815

Summer Programs

take courses like:

- Beginning Chinese
- Organic Chemistry
- General Biology
- College Writing
- Gender and Film
- General Physics
- Music Appreciation and more!

With the La Sierra Summer Program, you will enjoy a wide variety of classes, including complete allied health and science sequences, extensive tutoring, fun activities, and much more!

Registration
Opens
April 11

25% tuition discount!

For more information, call or visit

www.lasierra.edu/summer
(951)785-2148

The social network revolution

By NIC GIBBS
Staff Writer

Professors, professionals and academics ready to write off social media as a waste of time - I urge you to reconsider.

For now I feel alone on the social networking frontier.

Not once in my time here, and I am graduating in June, have I taken a class that has shown me how to harness the power of social networks.

Much as the invention of the telegraph, printing press and television, the advent of social media is changing the way we talk and the way we think.

I know social media is powerful, but still no one has taught me why it's powerful or more importantly how to effectively use it.

True, few have been able to answer these questions, but maybe this is because those capable have decided to ignore the existence of this powerful new medium. Consequently, there is no one to teach us.

Often I hear professors and professionals speak about Twitter and Facebook as if it is a disease or plague that is taking over and infiltrating our youth.

The complaints with how our generation uses and abuses these sites to share with everyone and no one in particular are unfounded and every move we make, however numerous, are warranted in my opinion.

The issue is not the medium, but how we use it.

When the printing press was invented it allowed the world to spread news and information at an unprecedented scale.

When print became the dominant medium, Socrates, the great orator he was, saw it as a tool detrimental to the academic community. He was the exception.

Where would we be if the best and the brightest minds stuck their noses up at print in the same way the best and the brightest detest social media today?

In the wake of current world wide events, it is impossible to deny the global power of social networks. Libya and Egypt recently used social networks to start and fight revolutions. Remind you of anything?

The American Revolution was driven home to the people by a series of articles and writings championed by the newest technological advance in communication.

I fully accept and acknowledge the issues older generations have with my generation's apathetic attitudes towards higher learning and our inability to often go deeper than a few surface level words. But, my generation also finds itself utterly alone during a social revolution.

Our adventures in effectively using social media as a means to positively change the world come without the aid of generations before us who could help us lead the way.

Instead, they claim they were dragged onto Facebook by a long distance friend or relative who pleaded with them to make a page. So here is my plea

Help make us experts on how we can utilize these great new mediums in ways other than satisfying our selfish desires. Get on these sites and use your experience and skills to give us tools to use Facebook instead of writing articles and books explaining how Facebook is further destroying the minds of our youth. Join the Facebook revolution.

Courtesy of Wikimedia Commons

The power of social networking goes beyond staying in touch with friends, it can be a revolutionary medium of communications.

Line etiquette: get in and get out

By ANGELINA GARIBAY
Staff Writer

Picture this: I am standing in line at Kohl's behind a woman waiting for the first available cashier and all of a sudden there is a man making his own line in front of ours.

"What do you think that man is doing?" I whisper to the woman, "Doesn't he realize the line is back here?"

I am frustrated, but we decide to leave him blissfully ignorant.

Waiting in line for your turn is something that everyone learns in kindergarten. It's a useful skill that gets drilled into you throughout your educational experience.

But, has line etiquette been drilled into everyone?

Have you ever been irritated by someone's lack of decision making capabilities while waiting in line?

You are salivating, hungry and waiting to order your burrito at the Santos Manuel Student Union's Taco Bell.

The problem is that you are behind someone that did not decide what they wanted ahead of time. They are hemming and hawing and you are about ready to jump over the glass to help yourself.

Your frustration is magnified by the time crunch to get to your next class.

Or, how about trying to satisfy your caffeine addiction as you rush into Starbucks only to be greeted with a extra long line full of procrastinators that do not seem to care about you getting your fix.

Maybe it is time for a new era of protocol police.

Hypothetically, let's say that someone is asking:

"What does a person do when someone in front of the line does not know what they want at the CSUSB's Taco Bell and I only have a few minutes before class?"

Your saintly mother might reply that patience is a virtue and waiting builds that character quality in you, the antsy person waiting.

But, in this new age of pro-activist protocol I would say get in there and help that person make up their mind. "You will love the supreme burrito. Really, it is the best."

Or, yell, quite politely of course, "Stand aside until you know what you want."

Another question:

"What does a student do when someone is hogging the printer in the library and seemingly doesn't know how to use it?"

The choices before you are to get angry, help the person or get the person help.

Now for a little message to the procrastinators, the undecided and the unhurried. Do a little preparation before you get in line.

Make up your mind about your food choices and stick with it before you get to the head of the line.

Get your money out before you need it.

Ask someone to show you how to use the equipment before you get tangled in the technicalities of it.

Etiquette is defined by Webster as "the rules indicating the proper and polite way to behave."

I think of it as having concern for those around you and making choices accordingly.

Louis Penna / Chronicle Photo

Lines at campus eateries and cafes like Starbucks (above) are always packed when you need to be in and out quickly.

Blackboard bugs and bites

By CARMEN HERRERA
Staff Writer

It has happened to everyone. Many students and teachers have experienced the ongoing problems of the campus' educational and communication web software, Blackboard.

The newest version of Blackboard was uploaded at the beginning of the 2011 Spring Quarter. Despite an updated version of Blackboard, technical problems continue to occur, disrupting classes and teaching that depend on this site.

I don't know how many times I have tried to login, only to see a blank page reading "service unavailable" or had an e-mail notifying that Blackboard is down and won't be up until hours or days later.

Blackboard crashes to the point where students cannot access their work for classes and delay the plans of the teachers as well.

The issues with Blackboard have seemingly gotten so out of hand that professors don't know what to do. There are only a few teachers who steer away from online usage and stick to using regular paper handouts for their assigned work.

Though it may be harder work to try to grade many papers, it seems worth avoiding the troubles of Blackboard and being delayed from grading because the site is down so frequently.

Last quarter my class was required to take our final exam via Blackboard at exactly 6 p.m. and closed down at 8 p.m. and to my horror, right at start time, Blackboard went down and I had no access to my final.

If you thought I freaked out, my poor professor was bombarded with e-mails and phone calls from panicked students trying to get to their final exam.

Many times, I would just prefer work on actual paper because Blackboard's inconsistency is overwhelming. You never know when the site will act up and ruin your plans to do homework or more importantly, take an exam.

Responses from students in the library and Santos Manuel Student Union were overwhelmingly negative. Students said, "It sucks." While others note that it's as problematic as the old system.

"It sucks for students when Blackboard is down because we rely on it so much," said student Yesenia Guterrez. "When we need to turn something in and it doesn't work, it's very frustrating."

I would have to agree with most of these students who are sick of the website's inconsistency. Once or twice can be passable, but when this happens multiple times in a single quarter, you're left scratching your head wondering why Blackboard "sucks."

There needs to be more solutions to this problem that greatly affects the student body. If the site overloads because too many students are trying to log in or using it at the same time, than maybe multiple websites need to be made for work rather than just one.

Now that the new Blackboard is up and running, some students still wait on whether Blackboard will truly improve.

Louis Penna / Chronicle Graphic

The only thing that's been consistent about Blackboard this quarter has been its inconsistency. Downtimes and bugs in the software prevent its use.

National Institute of General Medical Sciences

The CSUSB MARC Program
(Minority Access to Research Careers) is seeking excellent undergraduate students who plan to continue their academic careers and gain a Ph.D. in research-based disciplines
that have relevance
to health such as
psychology, biology,
chemistry, etc.

Program Benfits

- Recieve a stipend for over $900/month
- Travel money for conferences
- Partial tuition
waiver
- Tutoring services

For more information contact Brittani Washington, Program Coordinator
E-Mail: bwash@csusb.edu • Phone: (909) 537-3152 • Office: FO-180

Discover Cal State L.A.!

Summer Special Session 2011

Home for the summer?

- Check our schedule of classes for a possible elective or required course
- Get one step closer to graduation
- Cal State L.A.'s Summer Session is open to all students
- Ten-week and five-week terms
- Five-week term ends well before Fall Semester

www.calstatela.edu/extension/news

Offered through the College of Extended Studies and International Programs
California State University, Los Angeles

Open your heart and your wallet

By CHERAN DINGER
Staff Writer

Reyna Cruz, a CSUSB custodian, is trying to raise money to send her two children, Susana and Juan, on “The Annual Student Educational Trip to Washington D.C.” through Caesar E. Chavez Middle School here in San Bernardino.

According to the organization behind the excursion, USA Student Travel, young students will see, hear and feel American History in a “hands-on” environment that is sure to enhance their classroom experience.

“It would be a great opportunity for my kids to go somewhere they have never been before,” said Cruz.

This four-day excursion will take place June 4, 2012. The trip costs $1,749 per student.

The Washington D.C. trip is filled with historical landmarks and sightseeing.

The students will see the World War II Memorial, the Arlington National Cemetery and The Roosevelt Memorial to name a few.

“I want to see everything. I use Google maps a lot and I’ve mapped out a lot of things I want to see,” said Juan.

“I want to see the museums and I’ve heard about the art, I want to see a lot of places too,” said Susana.

Cruz is no stranger to the economic downturn that we are all dealing with.

Being a valued patron of the school, she needs our help with donations and sponsors to help make this dream come true for her children.

When asked how she likes working at CSUSB for over three years, Cruz said, “I like the environment. I like being in the public. I like seeing the smiles of the students and faculty.”

Juan, her oldest son, enjoys playing video games such as Mortal Kombat in his spare time and building what he calls “paper people”.

Isabel Tejada | Chronicle Photo

Help support our fellow custodian with raising enough money to send her two children on an educational and inspirational trip to Washington D.C. with their fellow classmates.

“He has always been good with his hands,” said Cruz. “Since he was little he was always building something.

Juan was recently recognized for his artistic skills in an awards ceremony, taking place at Caesar E. Chavez Middle School.

Only 10 students were asked to show their work in the exhibit. “I am so proud of him,” said Cruz.

Susana, her youngest child, is into outdoor activities such as running and wants to join a cross-country team in the future.

When she’s not doing her math homework she likes roller-skating with her friends in her neighborhood.

“She likes climbing and hiding in the trees,” Cruz said with a giggle.

These two ambitious and bright-eye students have an opportunity to see things they have only read about in a textbook or googled on the Internet.

With the help of all CSUSB faculty and student we can make two dreams come true for these deserving children.

The first deadline for payment is rapidly approaching for Reyna Cruz and her two children on May 5, 2011.

If you are interested in donating, please call Cruz at (909) 965-0645 for more information.

If you decide to donate don’t forget to ask for the tax ID so you can receive tax credit. Sponsorship information is available at USAstudenttravel.com or you can also call 1-800-949-0650 for more information on how you can donate,.

X marks the spot for internships

By NIN GARCIA
Staff Writer

X103.9 is more than just music.

They are currently seeking motivated college students to intern in their promotions department.

They are open to all students who are interested in either fields of communications and marketing.

A simple process which anyone can do is just walk in, ask for an application and fill it out. As always it would be best to attach a resume reflecting your skills and talents.

Nin Garcia | Chronicle Photo

Internships are offered in communication and marketing.

They are looking for students that have priorities, ready to learn and preferably good listeners. Talking a lot without listening is not a quality X103.9 finds very attractive.

Listening is a key essence when it comes to being successful if one wants to go far in the internship.

X103.9 offers a three month program for those interested in an internship. But it doesn’t mean it has to end there, many choose to stay longer if they find the program to their liking.

They have group interviews, so standing out would definitely be something to consider. Once the application goes through and X103.9 finds the individual a good asset to the crew, he or she will start off as a marketer and is now a part of the X-Team.

Being a part of the X-Team is probably a reward in itself, the individual will have the opportunity to meet new people, work with others who share the same goals and aspirations, and just having fun in the field of study the individual has a passion for.

Aside from being able to experience a new type atmosphere, the X-Team will be doing promotions, sales, events and online websites, they will be able have office hours during the week, and many other things depending on what the director dictates.

Nin Garcia | Chronicle Photo

X103.9 does not only present you with the top alternative hits, but also helps get students a step closer to success.

Vanessa Salazar, Assistant Marketing and Promotions Manager said, “It’s sometimes more important to get a hands on experience; it’s better than education itself.”

X103.9 has had many great interns that have attended CSUSB such as Amanda and “Shred” a nickname X103.9 gave him. “They came in and showed perseverance and passion; that drives them to work hard and just enjoy what they do,” said Salazar.

Salazar gave one last piece of advice to those who are interested in the internship, “you get out of it what you put in. If you put in a lot you will get a lot back.”

Recently X103.9 sponsored the Papa Roach Makeup show in the Coussoulis Arena. Performances by Alien Ant Farm, Panic at the Disco, The Black Cloud Collective had CSUSB at its greatest adrenaline rush. For more information on how to become part of the X-Team visit their website or contact them at 909-890-5904.

Calorie Confusion

Paige Jones does not agree with the false advertisement of calories on campus, Pizza Hut among others are at shame.

Katherine Henley | Coyote Chronicle

By KATHERINE HENLEY
Staff Writer

The Food Court located in the Santos Manuel Student Union (SMSU) is misleading students through their inaccurate advertising of incorrect calorie counts for certain meals.

As I walked into the food court section of the SMSU on my break before class to pick up a quick bite to eat, I couldn't help but notice Pizza Hut's large sign standing to my left advertising a delicious picture of Creamy Chicken Alfredo, for only 680 calories. Putting it to the test, I decided to double check with the nutritional guide that is available to everyone at the cashier counter. To my surprise the guide listed the Creamy Chicken Alfredo at 740 calories.

"If I'm eating at one of these places and I see an advertisement for 680 calories, I shouldn't have to think about if it's the truth or not," said hungry student Paige Jones.

A student who lives on campus and eats at Pizza Hut twice a day could garner an extra 120 calories, which translates to 3,600 calories or about one pound a month.

All of these would be hidden calories, due to their omission in false advertisement.

For the 3,600 hidden calories accumulated in one month, a student could have eaten about 24 slices of Pizza Huts six-inch Personal Pan Pizza, meat lover's pizza.

Even though Pizza Hut advertises the Meaty Marinara for 600 calories it does not match up with the 680 calorie Meaty Marinara as published in the nutritional guide.

"That is ridiculous [referring to false advertisement], no wonder the freshman who live on campus gain the freshman 15," said an outraged, Polet Milan.

Most diets today and even some health issues such as diabetes rely on counting calories. To someone on a diet, 80 extra calories is a significant intake.

"It makes me feel like I'm eating healthier when I order something of any of the restaurants in the food court because when they show the calories, like it's going to be better for me," said student Steve Wilson.

It is unnerving that students cannot trust the advertisements displayed to make a health conscious decision.

Although Pizza Hut had discrepancies that stuck out the most, Subversions and Taco Bell are guilty for false advertisements as well.

While the Subversions six-inch Italian sub is displayed on the menu as 590 calories, the guide indicates that the same six-inch is actually 685 calories.

At the time of print the general manager of dining services, Dave Janosky was unavailable for comment.

"I don't know why they show the calorie amount if it's doesn't match up with the guide. I rather not know, or think I'm eating healthier when I'm not," said Amanda Fountain, after discovering the misleading in the food court.

With the Grand Slam, Cranberry Chicken Salad and the California Turkey salad being all below 600 calories, they all matched up perfectly with the health guide. Along with the rest of the meals listed on the display, it seems that the most reliable and accurate advertisement in the food court is Denny's Fresh Express.

Greek week serves community and creates friendly competition among other Greeks

To the Greeks on campus, spring quarter means one thing: Greek Week!

Greek Week is a week-long event where various Greek organizations compete with one another.

The winner is presented with a trophy and, more importantly, bragging rights.

2011 Greek Week began this past Saturday, Apr. 30 and will continue until May 7.

The kick-off to Greek Week every year is a community service project.

This year the chosen community service project was Relay for Life which took place Apr. 30 - May 1 on the CSUSB library lawn.

Each sorority and fraternity was given points based off of the percentage of participants it had.

The next event is "Greek Speaker" on Monday, May 2 at 7 p.m. in the Santos Manuel Student Union (SMSU) Event Center.

This year's Greek Speaker is Will Keim. Keim states, "I want to inspire and empower students to live each day fully; to actualize their full potential; and to make the world a better place," as found on willkeim.com

Thursday, May 5, at 10 p.m., will be the Greek Social which takes place at Empire Bowl in Redlands. Again, participation points will be given accordingly to the organizations with the most members who are present.

Friday, May 6 in The Den will be a volleyball game. The teams will be made up of various Greeks playing against each other.

Last but not least is Lip Sync. Lip Sync, which is a skit for lack of a better word, will take place Saturday, May 7 in the events center in the SMSU.

Each team will put on their own 15 minute skit and will be judged based off on creativity/originality, props and costumes, accuracy (lip syncing the words), entertainment value, and overall performance.

Throughout the entire week, there is an on campus philanthropy project going on which entails collecting toys for the Campesino Project. Points are given to assigned teams for toy donations such as puzzles, dolls, scooters, sports balls, etc.

Taking into account that all Greeks are considered full time students in addition to having jobs, Greek Week ensures exhaustion, but I can honestly say that I don't think we would have it any other way.

All in all, I understand the concept of a bunch of young adults playing games, doing skits and going on group outings may seem a bit ridiculous to an outsider, but it truly is a week fueled with pride, friendly competition and lack of sleep.

Students can find more Greek info at: studentleadership.csusb.edu/GreekLife/

Live local bands

Lunchtime LIVE! Fridays at noon.

Listen to Coyote Radio on iTunes under "College Radio" Or click on "Listen Now" at <http://coyoteradio.csusb.edu>

Coyote Radio can also be heard Tuesday thru Friday from 9am-Noon on San Bernardino TV channel 3

CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY, SAN BERNARDINO

Tiki Hut Frozen Yogurt Co.

4414 University Pkwy. • San Bernardino (In the Ralph's Center)
(909) 887-3117 Visit our other locations in Highland & Yuma, AZ

• Self Serve Frozen Yogurt • Gift Certificates Available • Bar With Over 40 Toppings • Fundraising Available

CSUSB SPECIAL
20% OFF
Your Entire Order
Not valid with any other offer, special or coupon. Expires 06/17/11

CSUSB SPECIAL
20% OFF
Your Entire Order
Not valid with any other offer, special or coupon. Expires 06/17/11

www.TikiHutFrozenYogurtCo.com

Features

Don't become one more statistic; fight back

By YANETH HOIL
Staff Writer

The average rapist has 37 victims before they get caught. Don't allow yourself to become a number on their list by following Lauren Hines's self-defense tips and tricks.

According to Hines self-defense training these are some things that can save your life in the event that you are attacked.

For example, if a guy is approaching you, whether it is an acquaintance or a stranger, the best thing to do is to keep a minimum distance of two-arms length because he can't grab you from such a distance. The closer an attacker gets the more committed he is to the assault.

Once you have a "creepy" feeling or the sensation that something is not right trust your instincts and get to safety, your senses are your best defense.

Don't be afraid to hurt a strangers feeling you have the right to establish really clear boundaries for people you don't know. You can always scream something like "back off now!", in order to acknowledge their presence and that you are aware of the situation.

This works eight out of 10 times and there is no need for further confrontation. If it was a possible attacker odds are you have scared him away by showing him that you are not an easy victim and if it was just a passerby then you still established your personal space.

It's important for you to learn and acknowledge that you have other options besides submitting, you can fight back.

When at the party "Never drink the punch because you don't know what's in it. On college campuses 90 percent of assaults involve alcohol," said Hines.

When you go to a party with a handful of your girlfriends always have a buddy system. You can both look out for each other and mutually help one another in case of a dangerous situation.

"On average 80 percent of assaults against women happen in the home because 75 percent of those times it's somebody who we are familiar with as an acquaintance or even a neighbor," said Hines.

You are home alone watching your favorite episode of "Dancing with the Stars," when suddenly you distinctly hear that somebody is breaking into your house. If you have children you must run to their bedroom so that the intruder can't use them against you and now you can blockade the room and protect them.

It is also important to have an emergency exit plan that they can easily follow to get out of the house and go call for help.

Always inspect who is ringing your door bell and never let strangers into your house.

Car safety is also extremely important always lock your doors when you get out of your car and after you get in. If somebody car jacks you always surrender the car and possessions and run away from the assaulter. When there is a child present in the car make it clear that you must get your child before the car is taken and get away as soon as possible.

Always avoid being taken to a second location and always fight back whenever you see a chance.

Your life is worth more than anything material that you could ever purchase so take care of it by giving yourself the gift of a self-defense class. It can save your life and be prepared.

MaryRone Shell | Chronicle Photo

Make money in the comfort of your home by creating a profile with your skills, and be creative while saving money.

Earning extra cash just got easier

By JUSTINE PLEMONS
Staff Writer

It is no secret students are strapped for cash. With gas prices already $4.15 per gallon and rising, fees increasing, families to feed and care for, we are all looking for new ways to make extra cash.

We are all living on a budget, but you can only eat noodles and TV dinners for so long. At some point extra income is a must.

Increasing your income doesn't mean finding a part-time job outside, there are jobs you can do straight from home.

Some of these take some time to get started but once established the cash will begin to flow in. Freelancing is increasingly more popular with technology ever advancing. If you know how to write it's a great way to make some extra cash.

Blogging is not just for computer geeks these days. With the use of Twitter and Facebook, blogging is easier than ever. For some extra cash, start your own website, something your passionate about. Once you are established you can begin offering ad packages.

Many people would love to hire someone to fix their computers, sound systems or other technical devices but their services are too expensive. You can offer to teach basic computer classes for individuals or small groups.

If you are not technologically inclined there are still ways to make money from home or close to it. Offer your services by babysitting your neighbors, friends or co-worker's kids.

To find clients, post ads on websites like craigslist.com or sittercity.com. This website allows you to create a profile, get alerts about jobs in your area, and specify what you are looking for. There is a section for pet sitting as well.

If you are highly organized, offer your services to those who aren't. People are all about going green and recycling these days. Cleaning out a closet, room, or garage is a great way to get rid of some old stuff while making extra cash.

For those that don't work typical work hours, help senior citizens with errands and taking care of household needs. If you aren't comfortable driving people around, offer to do the errands on your own.

Depending on your skill or education level, offer tutoring services to your friends, family and co-workers school age kids. Private tutors are expensive so offering your services at a discounted price will benefit your wallet as well as the students.

Keep track of your income and your spending.

If you find that your expenses are greater than your income find ways to make extra cash, cut luxury items but by all means don't use credit cards! Creating and managing a budget is much easier when credit card debt isn't a factor.

Living frugally is difficult but not impossible.

Learn to reuse everyday items. Try doing it yourself projects when possible and learning to make your own things.

When doing your budget set realistic goals, calculate your income, and don't forget to save.

If your information about managing a budget visit couponshoebox.com.

AUDITIONS

Saturday, May 7th and May 14th starting at 9am

Cinderella

Perris Hill Bowl, 1001 E. Highland Ave. San Bernardino
A cast of 75 plus performers from 9 to college age are needed. Bring Sheet music and be prepared to perform a short vocal audition. An accompanist will be provided. J.U. does not allow the use of recorded accompaniment tapes of any kind. The bowl is located behind the tennis courts in Perris Hill Park. For more info, visit www.junioruniversity.org or call (909)889-0833.

Congratulations to this year's CSUSB graduating class!

Grad DVD

Capture a memory that will last a lifetime and share your accomplishment with family and friends.

Pre-order a DVD copy of your CSUSB commencement ceremony today!

$19.95 for a limited time, when you pre-order your Grad DVD before June 19th, 2011

Pre-order Online!

- Capture your special day
- Share with family and friends
- Professional broadcast-quality
- Includes Grad Days "Shout-Outs"

Order online: <http://GradDVD.csusb.edu>

Jesus Romero/Chronicle Photo

Darius Rucker (above) was one of the many unforgettable performers at Stagecoach 2011, California's country music festival. Fans came from all over the place to camp out for the weekend in Indio and watch performances on April 30 and May 1.

A weekend to remember at Stagecoach

By RENEE ETCHEBERRIA
Staff Writer

Southern California's largest country music gathering Stagecoach can be described as nonstop weekend party with incredible music performances providing the theme music.

From April 30 to May 1, people from San Francisco to San Diego filled Indio's Empire Polo fields like fish in the sea.

With so much room to roam the 50,000 people that showed up to the weekend music festival seemed minuscule in comparison to the size of the Empire Polo Club.

Getting lost in the crowds seems to be more of a thrill rather than a troubling issue. It is a way to meet new people and run into old friends, all while trying to find the actual people you came with. In addition to finding the shortest beer line.

The extremely long lines at the bathrooms or the fact that there is barely any shaded areas does not seem to bother the people that come out to Stagecoach because it is all for the love of country music.

As you look out toward the stage you will see people getting set up for the show. They pull out their chairs, towels and blankets so they can sit front row to country music's biggest performers.

Stagecoach is an abundance of cowboy hats and boots. Some come with their top of the line Stetson's while others get crafty creating a hat from a beer box.

To go along with that country attire of hats and boots you will also see attendees wearing many wristbands. One for the concert entrance, one for being 21 and over and some have one for the campsites.

As the sun goes down people begin to wander over to the campsites to join in on the festivities that the RV's have to offer. The campsite is its own little neighborhood, with RV's lined up for miles. The campers are more than welcoming inviting anyone who passes by.

It is a fun and exciting atmosphere with a laid back vibe. People take mundane activities and turn them into something fun. There are people playing every drinking game created while others work on their tans on the tops of their RV's.

Even well after the concert has ended you can still hear country music playing throughout the campgrounds.

The party never seems to end for these country music lovers. Stagecoach is a place to make new friends and create lasting memories.

Justin Udenze/Chronicle Photo

Hip-hop artist Curren$y rocks the stage as thousands of students and hip-hop enthusiasts watch the show under the sun.

The joy that spring brings

By JUSTIN UDENZE
A&E Editor

Inland empire students stood patiently in the sweltering sun on UCR's Bell Tower lawn, awaiting the arrival of underground hip-hop icons.

As the heat weathered on the will of the waiting, around 4 p.m. chants aimed at the lawn's constructed stage flew at the masters of ceremony.

Curren$y! Curren$y! Curren$y!, and then as if the chants summoned the artist from a magic lamp the hot spitter appeared on the stage to the fan's delight.

The performance marked the midpoint of an eventful April 30 afternoon as UCR's Associated Students Program Board (ASPB) presented Spring Splash 2011.

An annual music festival held in the center of the UCR campus featured 2011 performances by hip-hop artists Nipsey Hussle, Brother Ali, Curren$y and Big Boi from the legendary group Outkast.

Artists understand the importance of connecting to an audience and these performers showed their fan appreciation.

Curren$y told the crowd "I'm feeling real comfortable out here, I don't like going places where people don't know my music. I appreciate y'all."

Brother Ali, an albino artist from Minneapolis, Minnesota took the time to admire the crowd as well as the atmosphere. He expressed his appreciation for some of the finer things Southern California has to offer including the weather and the women.

Upcoming Los Angeles based artist, Nipsey Hussle added to his stage time joining friend and tour mate Curren$y on the stage for a second performance.

Synergy may be a word that best encompasses the environment that was created.

Curren$y is certainly an artist that likes to connect with his fan base, promising to come out in the crowd after the performance. The artist also took concern with one fan who seemed to have passed out in the middle of the audience.

"You guys need to take him out of here, is he okay? Is he out, like out of is he just chilling? Hey buddy, I need you to throw up the Jet sign if you're good."

After the fan put his pinky and his thumb out and lifted it in the air the crowd cheered and laughed.

"He's alright guys!" laughed Curren$y

The evening was closed out by a solo performance of headliner Big Boi, who took the time to revisit some of his Outkast classics.

Afterward the crowd lingered around the campus, buzzing about the performances and looking for the next thing to do on a spring Saturday night.

Sweet smooth sound of freshly built machinery

By EILEEN GUTIERREZ
Staff Writer

The live music industry may be in the middle of a robotic invasion.

It is now possible to go to a music concert where robots, instead of humans, perform and rock out with the crowd, but robots do. This new form of entertainment is made possible through a combination of robotics, human-computer interaction, artificial intelligence, and embedded computing.

The California Institute of the Arts has created a vision called KarmetiK, which may completely change how we look at music. The endeavor is a mix between watching a deejay spin on the tables on one side of the stage, while right below are musical instruments drumming along at their own pace.

KarmetiK, a combination of the words ‘karma’ and ‘kinetic’, is lead by Dr. Ajay Kapur and consists of a small group of scholars whose aim is to push the technology and musical barriers.

Lab members include artists, local and global musicians and consulting clients.

According to karmetik.com, The Machine Orchestra, “...brings together custom-built robotic musical instruments and human performers with modified instruments, unique musical interfaces, and hemispherical speaker-pods,”

Members of the band bring their own background and musical infusion to the band. As they create the beats, the machine-robots glide along to the created beats.

Kapur, the KarmetiK director, is also the director of the Music Technology program at CalArts. He is also instructor of Sonic Arts at the New Zealand School of Music at Victoria University in Wellington.

According to The Los Angeles Times, Kapur credits German-American musician Trimpin as being the “godfather” of the project.

Trimpin and Eric Singer, director of the New York-based League of Electronic Musical Urban Robots are credited as his influences.

Courtesy of The Los Angeles Times

Real life instrumentalists and performers play alongside robotic creations that are able to glide along and adjust in real time to the patterns of the music played

The lab is also in the process in creating programs for Windows, Apple’s iPhone, and the Google Android.

The KarmetiK website states the organization is constantly exploring options to incorporate live musicians into the act. The music length is predetermined, in order for it to be kept fresh and innovative.

On their Facebook page, KarmetiK states they are, “...inspired by the west coast supernatural, KarmetiK Underground blends flavours of east and west to create an ethnically charged tapestry of high energy live dance grooves.”

On January 27, 2010, KarmetiK and CalArts performed together at the Walt Disney Concert Hall’s RED-CAT performance hall. For the first time, humans, robots and machines performed together in a symphony.

The notions of an “artificial” or “robotic” symphony may be unusual or even unheard of, yet it flows. Personally, I can imagine this musical symphony occurring at a hot club in Santa Monica, with people not even realizing the difference.

Although no live performances are scheduled for this year, KarmetiK symphonies can be seen on Youtube. A DVD is available through Amazon titled, “KarmetiK Machine Orchestra” for $15.

Today may not be the day robots, machines and artificial intelligence take over, but the future is right around the corner.

Beastie Boys add more sauce

By KRYSTAL MCGEE
Staff Writer

After 30 years, The Beastie Boys have won their right to party.

Their new and highly-anticipated album “The Hot Sauce Committee Pt. 2” will finally be released on May 3 after years of uncertainty and setbacks.

The album was recorded in 2008 and 2009, with a release date set for September of 2009. Group member Adam Yauch’s sudden diagnosis of cancer in his salivary glands, however, postponed the release date for almost two years.

Through all of the group’s trials and tribulations, The Beastie Boys’ trademark blend of New York hip-hop mixed with old school punk rock makes this album a success.

The group’s experience in the music industry started with their successful entrance into the hip hop industry in 1984 by releasing 12 singles. In 1986, they released their debut album “License to Ill”, a mix of hip hop and rock that gave the group international attention.

The Beastie Boys’ original sound proved to be a success for the trio. “Licensed to Ill” became the best selling rap album of the 1980s and the first rap album to go #1 on the Billboard album chart, where it stayed for five weeks. It also reached #2 on the Urban album charts.

Even though “License to Ill” was a commercial success, the Beasties did not earn the respect of critics and hip-hop musicians at first.

“As the first white rap group of any importance, the Beastie Boys received the scorn of critics and strident hip-hop musicians, who accused them of cultural pirating ... but the Beasties weren’t pirating -- they treated rap as part of a post-punk musical underground, where the do-it-yourself aesthetics of hip-hop and punk weren’t that far apart,” according to MTV.

The group did not let the critics get the last word. The Beastie Boys kept making albums and selling records. According to New York Entertainment, the group has sold a total of more than 42 million copies worldwide and setting trends in video, fashion, and pop culture.

The sound that created the successful group still rings in their music today. If you are a fan of The Beastie Boys and if you’ve ever rocked or jammed out to their music then this album is for you.

The band recently released a re-make of their hit song, “You gotta fight for your right to party”. The group released a new video to go along with the song and in the video it featured star-studded cameos from Will Ferrell, Jack Black and Susan Sarandon.

This album has room to create a new fan base. Even though many of the Beastie Boys fans are 30 years and older, they still have the power to reach the young generation of today.

The Beastie Boys’ music reaches not only the hip hop industry but also the rock industry, so the possibility for a new or larger fan base for the Beastie Boys is endless and attainable.

The groups rap style and lyrics is what keeps generations of fans wanting more.

The album can be streamed and purchased on their website, Beastieboys.com

Earn your degree in education in 12–18 months at APU.

With more than 36 credential and master’s degree opportunities, we’re confident we have a program for you.

APU offers:

- Convenient classes at 8 Southern California locations and online.
- Programs in teaching, counseling, physical education, and administration.
- NCATE-accredited programs recognized by all 50 states and internationally.
- Resources that make transferring to APU a seamless process.

Classes start five times throughout the year. Contact us today!

Call

Click

Email

(800) 825-5278

www.apu.edu/explore/education

graduatecenter@apu.edu

AZUSA PACIFIC UNIVERSITY

AZUSA | HIGH DESERT | INLAND EMPIRE | LOS ANGELES | MURRIETA
ORANGE COUNTY | SAN DIEGO | VENTURA COUNTY | ONLINE

11209

Courtesy of NBC
Steve Carell, the unquestioned star of one of America's favorite sitcoms, left the show after seven successful seasons.

Coyote Chronicle’s favorite Michael Scott moments

By MATTHEW BRAMLETT
Asst. A&E Editor

Last Thursday, April 28, 2011, Steve Carell and his annoyingly lovable character Michael Scott bid farewell to seven years of being the manager of Dunder-Mifflin Paper Supply Company in Scranton, PA.

For many, it is the end of an era – the final awkward comment during seven years of uncomfortably hilarious situations.

Michael has always been the source of the most memorable quotations, so here’s ten of them to commemorate the end of the most popular office manager in America.

10. “If you are lying to me, right now, Pam, your baby is going to come out a liar. That’s how it works. They inherit things through the breast milk.”

9. “You don’t call retarded people retarded. It’s bad taste. You call your friends retards when they’re acting retarded.”

8. “(After sipping wine) That is sort of an oaky afterbirth.”

7. “Would you mind if I listened to my book on tape? I’m kind of a bookworm. It is a novelization of the movie Precious, based on the book Push by Sapphire.”

6. “I’m not afraid of corporate. But you know what I am afraid of? Gettin’ a boner.”

5. “Webster’s Dictionary defines ‘wedding’ as ‘the fusing of two metals with a hot torch.’ Well you know something? I think you guys are two medals. Gold medals.”

4. “Toby is in HR, which technically means he works for corporate, so he’s really not a part of our family. Also, he’s divorced, so he’s really not a part of his family.”

3. “Alright everybody in the conference room! I don’t care if you are gay, or straight, or a lesbian, or overweight! Just get in here, right now!”

2. “Guess what? I have flaws. What are they? Oh I don’t know, I sing in the shower? Sometimes I spend too much time volunteering. Occasionally I’ll hit somebody with my car. So sue me -- no, don’t sue me. That is opposite the point I’m trying to make.”

1. “Between the sheets, we were like Jordan and Pippen.”

DirecTV launches a strike at the film industry

By ADRIENE MOORE
Staff Writer

DirecTV just might be turning a movie night at home into the next best thing in entertainment.

The satellite-based multimedia company’s latest stunt will allow customers to purchase a movie on-demand 60 days after it is released in theatres and watch it in the comfort of their own home.

The first film that DirecTV has released is Adam Sandler’s “Just Go With It”. The customer will be able to watch the film for a period of 48 hours for $29.99.

“You can watch the Adam Sandler movie, a movie that opened about 60 days ago,” said Kim Masters, editor-at-large for the Hollywood Reporter in an interview with National Public Radio, “That is shorter than the window that is usually now preserved for movie theatres to play films.”

Masters told National Public Radio that DirecTV is making this drastic move to make up for a high amount of lost revenue in DVD sales.

“DVD sales have been hurt by the recession and things like Netflix and Redbox, where you can see movies if you wait a little longer, quite cheaply,” said Masters, “So they are looking for ways to get more money. And one of the ways they want to do it is to see how much you’ll pay to see movies and how quickly you want to see them if you’re going to pay that extra money.”

This new feature creates a fun new option for movie lovers who are looking for every reason to save cash, but it also creates a problem for theatre owners and filmmakers themselves.

A group of 23 filmmakers, directors and artists, including James Cameron and Michael Bay, signed an open letter expressing their concerns and opinions of DirecTV’s new service.

“Major studios are struggling to replace the revenue lost by the declining value of DVD transactions,” stated the letter, “Low-cost rentals and subscriptions are undermining higher priced DVD sales and rentals. But the problem of declining revenue in home video will not be solved by importing into the theatrical window a distributions model that cannibalizes theatrical ticket sales.”

Despite the outcry from filmmakers and directors, students here at CSUSB seem to welcome DirecTV’s bold new service.

“If I was going to the movies with a group of people, I’d rather stay in the comfort of my home and watch the movie there,” said student Michael Slater.

As filmmakers fear the end of the theater experience, more moviegoers are looking for cheaper alternatives. By unveiling this new service, DirecTV seems ready to give it to them.

CALIFORNIA STATE UNIVERSITY, SAN BERNARDINO

CSUSB MARC Program

National Institute of General Medical Sciences

Do you have questions about going to graduate school?
Do you have questions about getting involved in research?

CSUSB MARC Program

The CSUSB MARC Program (Minority Access to Research Careers) can help by providing peer mentoring for students in any health related major such as psychology, biology, chemistry, etc.

To set up a mentoring appointment contact: Brittani Washington, Program Coordinator
E-Mail: bwash@csusb.edu • Phone: (909) 537-3152 • Office: FO-180

EDWARDS MANSION
And Gardens

WEDDINGS
and Special Events

♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥

FREE WEDDING CEREMONY
(A $495 Value)
And 50% Off The LOFT BRIDAL SUITE
when you BOOK your reception at Edwards Mansion

www.edwardsmansion.com
(909) 793-2031
complimentary tours & estimates
2064 Orange Tree Ln. REDLANDS
Please mention this ad

Coyotes hiking on no pants day

By ANNETTE VERDEJO
Staff Writer

CSUSB students celebrate “No Pants Day” with a trek through the San Jacinto Mountains, without their pants of course.

The first Friday in May is always No Pants Day. It’s an internationally celebrated day.

The purpose of No Pants Day is simply to leave your pants at home for a day and enjoy breaking the social taboo and seeing peoples reactions when they realize you’re not wearing any pants.

The CSUSB Outdoors program is celebrating this day with a hike on the Cedar Springs Trail in the San Jacinto Mountains.

Some of the guidelines for the celebration of No Pants Day, are you cannot wear pants, skirts, kilts or a dress. The typical attire is modest boxer shorts.

“It sounds like a prank that caught on and more people started participating in it until it had become internationally known. I can’t believe that people in Australia are celebrating this and I had no idea that it actually existed,” said student Anthony Kruger.

In fact, most of the people who I asked about No Pants Day, actually had no idea that the holiday even existed.

Mackenzie von Kleist | Chronicle Photo

Anthony Kruger (left) and Daniel Ramon (right) getting ready for the hike in the San Jacinto Mountains on “No pants Day”

“When you first asked me if I would go on a hike with no pants, I thought you were crazy, but after you explained it I changed my mind. I would actually like to participate in that trip. Who doesn’t enjoy the fresh breeze on their legs every now and then,” said student Daniel Ramon.

Sign up is at the Student Recreation and Fitness Center, the deadline to sign up is May 5, at 6 p.m. The trip is open to anyone that is 18 and older. Students and SRFC Members: $33 | Faculty, Staff and Alumni: $44 | Affiliate: $55 | Community Members: $66.

On Friday, May 6 the SRFC’s van will depart at 4 p.m. and participants will hike up approximately seven miles and after arriving at the summit, they’ll enjoy the sunset and eat their dinner. On the way back to the van, only the moon will be out to guide participants back along with leaders and guides.

Participants will arrive back on campus at about 11 p.m. that same day.

One important note, the participants will shed their pants when they reach the mountains, they should remain fully clothed while at CSUSB.

No Pants Day may seem silly to most people, but in reality it’s all in good fun. Participants in this holiday should only shed their pants where it will be acceptable, not somewhere where you’re going to get in trouble for indecent exposure.

As with most CSUSB Outdoors trips, no experience is required and there will be people to guide you along the trail.

Don’t forget to leave your pants at home on May 6!

Cycle for foundation

Local event to help raise money and attention

By CHRIS HANLEY
Staff Writer

Thirteen year old Joseph Machado of Alta Loma has helped raise over $30,000 for disabled children from his love for bicycle riding.

The spectacular one of a kind kid road his bike from Alta Loma, CA to Washington, D.C. in just over 30 days with his dad riding with him the entire 3,000 mile trip.

Machado and hundreds of bike riders all across the Inland Empire will be showing their love for bike riding as they attend the sixth annual Cucamonga Challenge on May 7 at the Pacific Electric Trail in Rancho Cucamonga.

The inspiration for the young philanthropist is heartwarming. Machado, in an interview with Jeff Roggin on the television program “The Filter,” mentioned that while playing sports he got several injuries which caused him to be in a wheelchair. Unfortunately while Machado was in the wheelchair his peers treated him badly; they pushed him out of his wheelchair and would not be friends with him just because he was different.

“It was hard because I couldn’t do what the other kids were doing. It did, however, make me more appreciative of my health and I realized that I wanted to help kids all over America. Even today, I have a lot of pain in my ankle, but I will not let that stop me from riding,” said Machado, courtesy of Biking for America.

Active, a skateboarding company, is a key contributor to sponsoring Machado’s efforts of raising funds for children with disabilities.

The Pacific Electric Trail is a beautiful trail in which all people are encouraged to come and participate in the 29 mile bike ride. They are also offering a five and 10 kilometer run down the trail.

Onsite registration of the event will be available as early as 6:30 a.m. for those who have not yet registered. The Cucamonga Challenge bike ride will begin at approximately 8:00 a.m. Families are encouraged to come to the event as the “family fun ride” starts at 8:45 a.m.

The 10 kilometer run or walk will begin promptly at 9:00 a.m. and the five kilometer run will begin at 9:15 a.m.

Also, those who register early will be served lunch from Omaha Jacks restaurant from 11a.m.-12p.m.

The total cost for entry of the event in advance is $40 for people that are 16 or older. Joseph and all the young bike riders under 16-years old will only have a $10 entry fee for the event and ages 65 and over can register for $30.

The proceeds from the event will be used for the further development of the Pacific Electric Trail. For more information visit www.cityofrc.us/cityhall/cs/events/challenge.asp

This week in Sports:

May 2, 1939

Lou Gehrig ends 2,130 consecutive game streak, Yanks beat Tigers 22-2

May 4, 1924

8th Olympic games open at Paris, France

May 8, 1878

1st unassisted triple play in organized baseball, by Paul Hines

May 8, 1971

Joe Frazier beats Muhammad Ali at Madison Sq Garden

Coyote Jock Talk

Playoffs action

For NBA and NHL playoffs commentary, stay tuned to Coyote Jock Talk, as we break down match-ups and make bold predictions.

coyotejocktalk.blogspot.com

Coyote Chronicle: @CSUSBCronicle
Chronicle Sports Section: @CSUSB_CC_Sports
Sports Editor: @jesusromero760
Asst. Sports Editor: @JLBurnfn

EyeBrow Threading

at
House of Beauty

12 locations to serve you

San Bernardino

1353 W. Mill St. #112
San Bernardino, CA 92410
(Next to El Super and Anna's Linens)

Ontario

Ontario Mills Mall
(Next to the Rain Forest Cafe)

www.houseofeyebrowthreading.com

CSUSB
SPECIAL
$25.00
Brazilian Wax

with this coupon
San Bernardino or Ontario Location
Expiration: 17 June 2011

CSUSB
SPECIAL
$5.00
Eyebrow Threading

with this coupon
San Bernardino or Ontario Location
Expiration: 17 June 2011

Destiny in their own hands

By ISMAEL MORALES
Staff Writer

With four games remaining against rival UC San Diego (UCSD), the Coyotes look to finish the regular season off strong.

It's imperative for the Coyotes to finish strong to ensure a spot in the CCAA tournament and to carry momentum into the tournament.

Only the top four teams of the conference qualify for the tournament and it's still a possibility that the Coyotes will or won't qualify.

Coach Don Parnell feels that if the Coyote's do not play well in their remaining games and do not qualify to the tournament it will be because they beat themselves and in turn don't deserve to be in the tournament.

The Coyotes will travel down south for two road games against UCSD. The games are scheduled for May 5 and May 6.

The Coyotes will then finish the regular season with a double header against UCSD on Saturday May 7 at Fiscalini Field, in San Bernardino.

Hopefully when the dust has settled after this weekend's clash with the Tritons the Coyotes will be in the tournament and not on the outside looking in.

Playing well against a formidable team like UCSD will greatly improve the Coyotes chances of qualifying for the tournament and in turn give them confidence to know they can beat anyone in the tournament.

The Coyotes should already have some confidence having split four games against top seeded Chico State with all four games played at Chico State's home field. Pitching, defense and of course offense are all keys to success.

Parnell thinks that the Coyotes slow start on offense can partly be attributed to new bats. He feels that his players had to get adjusted to the new bats.

Parnel roughly estimates that the batting average across the conference has dropped about 30 percentage points.

A sure sign that it's not just the Coyotes who needed to adjust to the new bats. Good pitching is the most important part in winning a baseball game.

The Coyotes have a great pitcher in Aaron Brooks who was named the CCAA pitcher of the week for the week of April 18-23.

Brooks overwhelmed Cal State Monterey Bay on April 21 pitching a 2-0 shut-out.

Brooks pitched a complete game his 3rd of the season and at one point retired 14 straight Otters.

If the Coyotes take a lead into the 9th inning they have a great closer in Josh Pond.

Pond continues to add to his saves record he established earlier this season.

If the Coyotes find a way to get their pitching, hitting and defense clicking together then the sky is the limit.

Come out to Fiscalini Field Saturday May 7 to show your support for our Coyotes baseball team.

Monday, June 13 the Graduation Issue of the Coyote Chronicle prints, and you could be part of it

Buy your
Coyote Shout Out
for the Graduation Issue

Graduating Seniors can appear in print for just $10

Three easy options

1. Submit your own 2x3.5 inch design
2. Submit a photo and 30 words to our designers
3. Submit 60 words to our designers

Thank you CSUSB
I now have the ability to succeed!
Love to my family
and my 'Yotes!

Alicia Ramirez

To place a shout out or for more info contact Linda Sand
909.537.815

CAL POLY POMONA

ACCELERATE
YOUR PROGRESS
TOWARD A DEGREE @
CAL POLY POMONA

Hurry! Select your courses today. Summer registration for all sessions begins May 2!

Classes are open to visiting students, newly admitted students, recent high school grads and members of the community. Admission not required.

Supercharge your summer.

Move closer to your career goals by taking classes at Cal Poly Pomona.

The Cal Poly Pomona Advantage:

- Experience our high quality, polytechnic university
- Choose from a wide variety of available courses
- Earn academic credit that is transferable
- Select from day or evening classes

Three convenient sessions:

10-Week Session	June 20 through Sept. 1
5-Week Session A	June 20 through July 26
5-Week Session B	July 27 through Sept. 1

GET AHEAD THIS SUMMER AT WWW.CEU.CSUPOMONA.EDU/SS-SB

For at least one night, the NFL is back

The Coyote Chronicle goes deep inside the NFL draft picks and the opening day

Commissioner Roger Goodell (right) stands with Prince Amukamara (right) as the New York Giants pick him 19th overall.

By HECTOR GAMA
Asst. Sports Editor

Soon after the Green Bay Packers hoisted up the Vince Lombardi trophy, reclaiming the title that was rightfully theirs to begin with, uncertainty, concern, and pessimism overtook NFL fans and players alike.

With a possible lockout looming in the distance, many people feared that the 2011 season would be as lifeless as a graveyard in the middle of the night.

Today, it is still uncertain whether or not there will be football next season.

What is for certain, however, is that the NFL Draft took place last Thursday, April 28.

Prior to the event, there was much speculation as to who would be selected first overall, where players like Cam Newton and Patrick Peterson would end up and whether or not players would even show up.

Many mock drafts were formulated, none of which resembled each other.

Mel Kiper Jr., American football analyst for the ESPN television channel, projected that Cam Newton, Von Miller, Marcell Dareus, A.J. Green, and Patrick Peterson would be the first five players selected in this year's draft.

I asked Thomas Brown, CSUSB student, who he thought would be selected number one.

"I think Cam Newton will be the first pick," said Brown. "He's big and strong, and has a cannon. He'll really help Carolina," Brown concluded.

As it turned out, Newton was indeed drafted number one overall by Carolina.

One interesting name that was being tossed around was Tryon Smith's.

Smith, who was an offensive lineman for USC, attended Rancho Verde High School in Moreno Valley.

He emerged as a standout in the Pac-10, winning the Morris Trophy as the conference's top offensive lineman as voted by the league's defensive linemen according to CBS Sports.

Kiper projected that he would be selected 13th overall by the Detroit Lions. He ended up being selected 10th overall by the Dallas Cowboys.

The first surprise of the night came when the Atlanta Falcons, following a trade with the Cleveland Browns, selected wide receiver Julio Jones 6th overall.

Atlanta gave up their first, second, and fourth round picks this year, and a first and fourth round pick next year in order to attain Jones.

The following two picks were also shocking as the San Francisco 49ers selected defensive end Aldon Smith 7th overall, and the Tennessee Titans selected quarterback Jake Locker 8th overall.

Many question Tennessee's decision to select Locker over Missouri quarterback Blaine Gabbert.

In addition, many analysts feel that quarterback Christian Ponder, who was selected 12th overall by the Minnesota Vikings, was picked too high in the draft.

Another notable that was drafted late was Alabama's star running back Mark Ingram dropped all the way down to 28, as he was selected by the New Orleans Saints.

By J.LEVI BURNFIN
Asst. Sports Editor

1. Carolina Panthers: Cam Newton, QB- While Newton may turn out to be a bust, he does have huge upside which is needed to bail out this failing franchise. A-
2. Denver Broncos: Von Miller, LB- Miller is a versatile DE/OLB that will give the Broncos some needed pass rushing ability and star power on defense. A+
3. Buffalo Bills: Marcell Dareus, DT- Dareus will probably be seen at every defensive line position as he is versatile enough to play inside and outside. A-
4. Cincinnati Bengals: A.J. Green, WR- This may be the Bengals final desperate attempt to appease frustrated QB Carson Palmer but I think it will be too little, too late leaving the Bengals with a talented WR with no QB to get him the ball. C+
5. Arizona Cardinals: Patrick Peterson, CB- Peterson is an elite talent that can be paired with incumbent CB Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie to create a formidable duo in the Cards secondary. A+
6. Atlanta Falcons: Julio Jones, WR- Although giving an arm and a leg in a trade is not legal, the Falcons came pretty close as they traded this and next year's 1st round picks and three other picks to the Browns to select Julio Jones. He better pan out. B
7. San Francisco 49ers: Aldon Smith, DE- They passed on Prince Amukamara, who is widely said to be a perfect fit, to select Smith. Apparently they liked his pass-rushing ability but he is undersized and may be a liability in the run game. B-
8. Tennessee Titans: Jake Locker, QB- First big surprise when the Titans passed on Gabbert to select Locker. Locker's ability and intangibles are undeniable but his accuracy needs to improve to become a good NFL QB. B
9. Dallas Cowboys: Tyron Smith, OT- The Cowboys decided that an offensive line to protect Romo might be important and selecting Smith to pair with left tackle Doug Free is a good step towards that goal. A
10. Jacksonville Jaguars: Blaine Gabbert, QB- Jaguars apparently were so tempted by Gabbert's semi-fall down the draft that they traded up with the Washington Redskins to select him. He was rated by most as the second best QB in this draft. B+
11. Houston Texans: J.J. Watt, DE- The Texans are switching to a 3-4 defense and having a sturdy run stuffing defensive end like Watt is vital. A
12. Minnesota Vikings: Christian Ponder, QB- While this pick is definitely a reach, Ponder is considered to be perhaps the most "NFL ready" prospect in the draft and he has weapons around him to compete but will he be able to minimize the mistakes he was prone to in college? C+
13. Detroit Lions: Nick Fairley, DT- Pairing NFL Defensive Rookie of the Year Ndamukong Suh with Fairley is a scary DT duo. B+
14. St. Louis Rams: Robert Quinn, DE- Quinn was suspended for his entire final year in college otherwise he could have easily been a top-5 pick. B+
15. Miami Dolphins: Mike Pouncey, OG- Pouncey's brother, Maurkice, is probably the better player but Mike could still be a very good inside lineman for a decade. B+
16. Washington Redskins: Ryan Kerri-gan, DE- The Redskins were able to trade down, accumulate valuable draft picks and still select an impact player. But will he follow the path of many other Big-10 defensive end busts? B
17. New England Patriots: Nate Solder, OT- Apparently the Matt Light era is over

- and the rebuilding of an offensive line to protect perhaps the most valuable player in the NFL begins. B+
18. San Diego Chargers: Corey Liuget, NT- Liuget is not the behemoth that many space eating Nose Tackles are in 3-4 schemes but he could potentially bulk up and become the vital run-stuffing NT that the Chargers need. A-
  19. NY Giants: Prince Amukamara, CB- This is an absolutely amazing value for the Giants to select a top-10 player at 19 and at a position of need. Not quite the playmaker that Peterson is but he will be a solid complimentary piece in a great defense. A
  20. Tampa Bay Buccaneers: Adrian Clayborn, DE- Clayborn may be the least talented DE selected in the first round and the Bucs will be relying heavily on Clayborn who may disappoint. C+
  21. Cleveland Browns: Phil Taylor, DT- This was a slight reach and Taylor fits more into the 3-4 scheme as he isn't very effective in pass rushing but he will be able to stop the run. B-
  22. Indianapolis Colts: Anthony Castonzo, OT- Costanzo is a mammoth and when a team has a chance to add protection for Peyton Manning, it is never a bad idea. A
  23. Philadelphia Eagles: Danny Watkins, OT- Watkins is a great story that will be written about ad nauseum but he is an important pick for the Eagles as he will protect Vick's backside at right tackle. B+
  24. New Orleans Saints: Cameron Jordan, DE- Jordan has the athleticism and strength to become the best DE selected in this draft and the Saints could really use an edge rusher. A
  25. Seattle Seahawks: James Carpenter, OT- Carpenter is the least athletic lineman taken in the draft and while that is not a deal-breaker, it is definitely not a good sign. Carpenter may offer depth to an offensive line at best. C
  26. Kansas City Chiefs: Jonathan Baldwin, WR- The Chiefs had a desperate need for another option besides Bowe at WR and Baldwin has some of Larry Fitzgerald's skills so this may prove to be a huge win for the Chiefs. B+
  27. Baltimore Ravens: Jimmy Smith, CB- The Ravens' secondary were exposed at times last year and they were able to grab the second most talented CB in this year's draft. Smith's character concerned many but was able to answer most of them during the combine interviews. A
  28. New Orleans Saints: Mark Ingram, RB- The Saints essentially traded one Heisman winner (although stripped of it) Reggie Bush for another at the RB position. Bush and Ingram are polar opposite players so it will be interesting to see how he is utilized. C+
  29. Chicago Bears: Gabe Carimi, OT- The Bears obviously need plenty of help on the offensive line and Carimi is a beast. Though a better run blocker than pass blocker he may not necessarily mesh with what the Bears would like to do offensively. B
  30. NY Jets: Muhammad Wilkerson, DE- The Jets biggest need by far was a 3-4 DE and there were two DE in the draft who filled that need, apparently the Jets liked Wilkerson better which left... B-
  31. Pittsburgh Steelers: Cameron Heyward, DE- Steelers grabbed Heyward after the Jets selected Wilkerson instead. Statistically, Heyward is the better player. A-
  32. Green Bay Packers: Derek Sherrod, OT- The defending national champions were able to get through last year with an over-performing line but now they upgraded the tackle position by taking Sherrod with the last pick in the first round. A

Coyote Chronicle: Athlete of the Week

Athlete of the Week

Name: Josh Pond

Sport: Baseball

Position: Pitcher

Class: Junior

Moment:
vs. Sonoma State

Closer Josh Pond tied the CCAA single-season saves record vs. Sonoma State in a 3-2 victory, in the first of a doubleheader on Saturday. Pond faced four batters and struck out three in the ninth inning for his 16th save, tying Sonoma State's Paige Dumont (2007) and CSU Dominguez Hills' Brian Cortes (2001) for the conference record.

More About:

Pond is leading his team with a fantastic 1.53 ERA. Opposing hitters are hitting a pathetic .167 against him, and in only 18 appearances, he has accumulated 26 strikeouts. His go to pitch is a fastball, but he also has a slider and a change-up in his repertoire. Earlier this year, Pond became CSUSB's single-season saves leader.

Courtesy of CSUSB Athletics

Pond is gaining a reputatin as a fierce closer for the 'Yotes as his saves break records thus far this season.

CCAA golfer of the year

By MACKENZIE VON KLEIST
Assistant News Editor

Big man on campus and golfer extraordinaire, Kenny Pigman, received CCAA player of the year for CSUSB.

The highest honor within the division is CCAA player of the year and is selected by all the coaches within the conference.

To gain this prestigious award, athletic performance and ability to work with a team is not only key but vital.

"I feel good about the award," said Kenny Pigman. "I don't want to focus on that, my goal is to win nationals. I feel accomplished for getting it, but nationals are the one thing on my mind right now."

Pigman fired a 3-under-par, 213 in 54 holes and tied for fifth place at the past tournament, paving the way with the help of his teammates for the success of this golf season.

However, Pigman's confidence has seemingly been enhanced by the award and his focus for regionals goes untouched.

"I had a scoring average under par this whole year which is 71, I was somewhere around 30 under par," said Pigman.

"I'm not playing at my peak performance level, I played better last summer," said Pigman. "Ask a professional golfer on the PGA tour, they will tell you they like 10 out of 70 shots they hit. I make a lot of good shots, but I'm not making the putts I usually make," Pigman continued.

Next time you find yourself being a couch potato or eating burgers and fries in your dorm from the Santos Manuel Student Union, try and remember the athletes around campus that you will more than likely find at the gym and get yourself motivated by watching their workout regime.

"I don't work out during the season because it affects my swing", said Pigman. "Off season I hit the gym hard and try to get bigger to make my swing faster. A lot of resistance training, a lot of reps, a lot of shoulder and back routines are part of my intense workout."

"I don't practice, I play a lot", Pigman continued. "You can find me at Oak Query, Goose Creek as well as Empire Lakes since I work there."

With such a massive amount of time devoted to this tremendously difficult sport the big man on campus has a major plan for his future in golf.

"I'm turning professional, I don't know when, maybe September 2011, hopefully May 2012", said Pigman. "I'm going to finish school first, I want to accomplish that because I'll be traveling a lot around the country."

Get your autographs now from this CCAA player of the year, with such great future aspirations from Pigman who knows where and who we will see him playing against, maybe Tiger Woods or Rory McIlroy.

Make sure to keep track of the coyote golfers regionals this week on the Coyote Athletics' webpage, csusbathletics.com. and the coyotechronicle.net.

Mackenzie von Kleist | Chronicle Photo

CSUSB's Kenny Pigman tees up at Arrowhead Country Club for a round of golf as he prepares for the upcoming nationals.

Dive into Splash-a-palooza

By BRITTANY SHAW
Staff Writer

'Just keep swimming' is the motto everyone will be using May 4, 2011.

Splash-a-Poolooza is a fun filled event that will make it a lot more exciting," said Mark Oswood, the marketing coordinator for the event.

Starting at 6 p.m. the swim meet will be held at the CSUSB pool.

There are four events and individuals can sign-up for multiple events.

Any student can participate by signing up online for the swim meet games.

The first event is a 50 yard freestyle is an unregulated swimming style. The next event is the 50 yard breaststroke.

Shortly following this event will be the two relay events.

First the 200 yard freestyle relay and last will be the 200 yard Co-ed Inner tube relay. Each team will need to have two women and two men in order to compete.

While all this is going on, sponsors

Hawaiian Pizza, Snow Cones and Tiki Hut Frozen Yogurt will be available to everyone who attends. And yes, everything is completely free!

Following the swim meet there will be activities such as a big blow up waterslide, slip and slide, belly flop contest, hulla hoop contest and limbo contest.

This is an annual event, but the name was changed this year. Last year it was referred to as the Coyote Luau.

That's not even all of it at 7 p.m. the inner tube water polo game will start.

Come on by and jump in!